Zoomy Communications is the leading FTTH infrastructure provider committed to an open access network that helps build communities for today and tomorrow.

Zoomy's mission is to design, build, own and operate fiber-powered networks, offering a full-suite of services and choices to the communities they serve. Zoomy contracts with premier service providers for voice, data and cable TV services. Zoomy is committed to offering home owners an open access network.

Zoomy has constructed world class, scalable FTTH networks for more than 20 developments, lighting more than 30,000 homes with high end capabilities. By building relationships with both service providers and developers, Zoomy is able to deliver technology sustainable communities to homeowners.

Zoomy Communications' Service Provider partners quickly extend their brands and accelerate revenues, while eliminating their ongoing access maintenance costs. Zoomy Service Providers own the customer relationship while delivering exceptional quality of service over world class, scalable FTTH networks—without having to use their capital.

Zoomy Communications' Developer partners can offer potential home buyers unique lifestyle amenities, freedom of choice among service providers and technology sustainable communities. Zoomy can differentiate a Developer's project and generate higher home absorption rates by providing a world class FTTH network as an alternative to the exclusive incumbent carrier.

Zoomy is an employee-owned, private company with a management team that is comprised of experienced executives from the telecommunications industry. Zoomy founder, Diane Kruse, currently serves as the chairman of the Fiber to the Home Council.
